Is the Sun Growing Cold?

We want to know whether the sun is showing any symptoms of decay, says the Story of the Heavens Ars the days as warm and as bright as they were ton years ago? We can find no evidence of any change since the beginning of authentic records. If the sun's heat had perceptibly changed within the last 2,000 years we should expect to find corresponding changes in the distribution of p'anets and animals, but no such change has been detected.

There is no reason to thick that the cli mate of ancient Greece or of ancient Rome was appreciably different from the climates of the Greece and the Rome that we know at this day. The vine and olive grow now where they grew 2,000 years ago. We must not, however, lay too much stress on this argument, for the effects of slight changes in the sun's heat may have been neutralized by corresponding adaptions in the pliable orgapisms of cultivated plants

All we can certainly conclude is that no marked change has taken place in the best of the sun during historical ime. But when we come to look back into vastly earlier ages we find the most copious evidence that the earth has undergone great changes in climate. Geological records can on this question hardly be misinterpreted. Yet it is curious to note that these changes are hardly such as could arise from the gradual exhaustion of the sun's radiation. No doubt in very early times we have evidence that the earth's climate must have been much warmer than at present. We had the great carboniferous enoch, when had the great carboniferous epoch, when the temperature must almost have been tropical in arctic latitudes.

Yet it is hadly possible to cite this as evidence that the sun was then much more powerful, for we are immediately reminded of the glacial epoch when our temperate zones were incased in sheets of solid ice, as northern Greenland is at present. If we suppose the sun to have been hotter than it is at present to account for the vegetation which produced coal, then we cught to assume the sun to be colder than it is now to account for the glacial epoch. It is not reasonable to attribute such phenomena to such oscillations in the radiation from the sun. The glacial epochs prove that we can not appeal to geology in aid of the doctrine that a secular cooling of the sun is now in progress.

The geological variations of climate may bave been caused by changes in the earth itself, by changes in the position of its axis, by changes in its actual orbit, but however they have been caused, they hardly tell us much with regard to the previous history of the sun. The heat of the sun has lasted for countless ages, yet we can not credit the sun with the power of actually creating heat. We must apply even to the mej-stic mass of the sun the same laws which we have found by our experiments on the earth. We must ask: Whence comes the heat sufficient to supply this tremendous outgo-

REMARKABLE PIECES OF CUTLERY -'Yes," said a Malo street hardware dealer, Steam Flooring & Planing Mill "that is the largest knife in America. It was made to order by a firm in Germany. One man did the whole job, and it took him just a year."

The knife in question is known to almost every person in Cincionati, and perhaps for 100 miles around. It has fifty-six blades and is a chest of tools in itself, containing anything from a slender toothpick or a cigar punch to a pair of selssors or a handsaw. The handle is of tortoise shell and the mov-able parts are gold plated. It weighs thir-teen pounds, and a modest card says, 'For sale, $500."

"That is not the largest in the world, though," continued the desier. "Jonathan Crookes invented and made a unique and superb specimen of cutiery in the shape of a knife with 1,821 blades, which has been the wonder of the world of cutiers. He then worked for Joseph Rodgers, of Sheffield, England, who now has the big knife in his F. PAFF & SON'S. possession, bu' Crookes has since started up in business for himself, and with his old employer and George Wostenhoim has made Sheffield famous for its cutlery."-Cincinnati Times-Star.

Wake Up.

If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.
